Non-Warranty items that are part of Manufacturers recommendations for the care of your tables:

Sealing and painting:

* Concrete should be evaluated and resealed if needed every 2 years using a quality polyurethane sealer. Failure to reseal concrete can lead to staining and over time to deterioration.

* Sealant is especially important on chess tables as there is a combination of materials in the table top (concrete and marble). Over time moisture can work its way between the two materials and start to degrade these joints. Keeping the sealant up-to-date can prevent this deterioration and help your tables to last for generations of use.

CARE AND MAINTENANCE

Concrete Chess Tables

Concrete chess tables require little care and maintenance throughout their lifetime.

Installation:

During installation care should be taken to protect the surface and sides of the table top. Keep wrapping on the tables until installation is completed. Bolts should be tightened slowly, alternating between bolts so that undo pressure is not put on a single point of the table.

Daily care:

Tables may have dust, small dirt particles, sand, leaves, tree needles, or other debris on them from being outside. Wiping them off with a cloth or soft brush before use may be beneficial.

Weekly or Monthly care:

Optional: You may want to hose off the tables now and then with water from a hose or spray bottle and a cloth. A non-corrosive detergent is optional.

Yearly:

Concrete should be evaluated or inspected every year to 2 years and if it is determined that the table should be resealed, then a concrete sealer should be applied over the surface and sides of the table top and leg surfaces as well. Manufacturer recommends a quality polyurethane sealer, of which there are many brands. Failure to reseat concrete can lead to staining and over time to deterioration. Choice of sealants can include anti-graffiti properties or a plain clear polyurethane sealant, depending on your needs and access to the tables by the general public.
